Enthusiasm Wins.

The very fact that you are carried away with a thing advertises it among your friends. And the better your judgment the better your enthusiasm convinces. People just can't help being impressed when they see a man they respect engrossed in some splendid enterprise. They may not know much about it. They may even be opposed to it. But your enthusiasm is going to win respect and then allegiance. So the big thing is to be so filled with your job that it becomes a joy to you. When it does that Tom Sawyer will have nothing on you in the fence white-washing business. The great enterprises of the world have been put through because the people who believed in them were enthusiastic enough to carry conviction into enough hearts and purses to back the enterprise.

Popular Turkish Drink.

For centuries the Turks and other Mohammedans have made and drunk a liquor fermented from barley called "booza." It has been especially consumed by warriors because, while it does not intoxicate like wine, "it gives heat and strength to the body and does away with hunger." Excess in drinking it often leads to gout and dropsy so that the inhabitual booza drinker generally carries a cane or staff. For this reason there has long been a Turkish saying that "the boozer is a friend of dogs," the reference being, of course, to his readiness to strike with his stick any dog that uninvited fawned upon him. For centuries booza makers were an essential addendum to every camp of Mohammedan soldiers. They were generally Tartar gypsies who were most skilful in the brewing of the drink.

Gifts That Count

Gifts are useful but they do not mark the highest type of giving. Benevolences, college and community programs depend largely on gifts. Some are sacrifices and some are not. People with plenty of money can give largely and not submit themselves to sacrifices. Their money does just as much per dollar as does the money of anyone else. And it is from these fortunate individuals that our endowments and other gifts come. They are great boons to some of the world's greatest efforts. Still they cannot rank with the gifts entailing sacrifice. When the gifts of men and women result in curtailed pleasures, food and clothing to the giver, they certainly reveal the noblest type of giving.—Grit.

Irish Protestants Called Orangemen

The name Orangemen was given to the Irish Protestants about the end of the seventeenth century by the Roman Catholics. They were so called because of their support of William III of England prince of Orange. There is also a secret political and religious society, instituted in Ireland in 1795, which is known as Orangemen. It was organized for the purpose of upholding the Protestant religion and ascendancy, and of opposing Romanism and the Roman Catholic influence in the government of the country. Orangemen are especially prominent in Ulster, Ireland, but local branches are found all over the British empire as well as in many parts of the United States.

"Stick to Your Last."

The familiar proverb, "The cobbler should stick to his last," is of Latin origin and very old. It is related that the Latin artist, Apelles, having executed a famous painting, exposed it to public view, when a cobbler found fault because the painter had placed too few latchets in the foot attire. Apelles amended the fault, and set on his picture again. Next day the cobbler complained of some other feature of the picture, when Apelles reproved him in effect, "Keep to the shop, cobbler, but do not attempt to criticize what you do not understand;" the sense of which is, "The cobbler should stick to his last."

From My City Window.

It is a dark night out of my window, but in the west the fading sunlight is still remembered from pale streaks of color through the clouds. The lights from my city's tall violet buildings glow in contrast to the shadowed sky; while to one side the intense blackness, with only an occasional boulevard light, marks the vast expanse of park stretching to the lake beyond. High up in the darkening heavens shines Jupiter, full-orbed and solitary. Now a cradle moon slips from behind the clouds, a soft silver bow of light—and now—is veiled again.—Christian Science Monitor.

Good Roads Essential.

Civilization cannot spread and maintain itself without roads. The Romans knew that, and laid out their highways with so keen an eye to the country that thousands of miles of railways follow the ancient Roman tracks today. Lost through the middle ages, road making came back with modern times, but distant regions never were firmly linked together until Stephenson showed the way.

Many Write of Joan.

Eighteen years ago a catalogue of works then existing was published under the title of "Bibliography of Works Relating to Joan of Arc." It contained 667 works of general biography, 849 that dealt with particular portions of the maid's life, 160 dramas and twenty-one operas, and the compiler stated that he could have included another 1,000 volumes.

Largest of All Barometers.

The big barometer at Faenza, Italy, set up some years ago as a memorial to Torricelli, is thought to be the hugest of all such instruments. The oil column in this barometer stands normally at about thirty-seven feet, and its fluctuations are read in feet instead of inches, as in the case of ordinary thermometers.

Horrible English Words.

One can easily add to Victor Hugo's list of horrible English words. "Genteel," for instance, is an adjective that sets the teeth on edge, and "select" (used as an adjective) is another word that only a second rate person would select. "Emerge" and "transpire" are both repulsive to use and any breakfast is always spoiled when a correspondent "thanks him in anticipation," or a tailor asks him to come and try on his "esteemed favor"— meaning trousers.

Advantage of Eucalyptus.

It requires more than a century for a cedar tree to grow large enough to yield a 30-foot telephone pole. The eucalyptus will attain a larger growth in 30 years, and its wood is quite as lasting.

NEED FOR PROTECTION

It is altogether likely that the tariff will not be a prominent subject of discussion in the present political campaign. The League of Nations, class legislation, class government, preservation of law and order, economy in governmental management cost of living—all these are questions of such pressing importance that voters will overlook the economic problem which is of great permanent importance to the prosperity of the United States. The European war served as an almost complete bar to the importation of foreign products. Foreign industries have not yet resumed their normal production and consequent importation of foreign commodities has not been restored to the proportion that existed prior to the outbreak of the war.

But although present trade conditions do not impress the subject of atriff upon the minds of the voters, those who study conditions and look to the future will realize the need of taking precautions against an influx of foreign goods at prices with which the American producers can not compete and maintain the American standard of wages and living. The United States learned a lesson in military preparedness after the outbreak of the war in Europe. Although we may have no immediate need for a protective tariff law, wisdom dictates the adoption of a policy of economic preparedness in anticipation of the commercial contest which is certain to come.

Once before, the United States profited by a foreign war. During the Napoleonic wars, a little more than a century ago, the interruption of oceanic trade shut off imports into American markets and resulted in a very rapid development of American industries, with consequent large employment of American labor at continuous and profitable wages. The end of the European wars almost coincident with the close of our own war of 1812-1814, threw our markets open once more to foreign products, with the result that American industries languished. When the payrolls of the factories were discontinued the effect was reflected in every other line of industry, agriculture included. Concerning the situation which then existed, Thomas H. Benton, a Senator from Missouri, said:

"No price for property, no sales—except by the sheriff—no purchasers, except the creditors, no demand for labor, no demand for farm products. Distress wasthe universal cry and relife the universal demand."

Great Britain is rapidly returning to normal productiveness in manufactured goods. Japan built up her industries enormously under the stimulus of war conditions and the recent financial reverses in that country will establish a low scale of wages which will permit the production of commodities in that land of cheap labor for export to the United States. Importation of cheap commodities from any country can have but one effect in the United States—the substitutiin of the foreign commodity for an American product with consequent diminution of employment for American producers.

Every man thrown outof employment in America means a decrease in the purchasing power of the American people and a poorer market for every American commodity. If American statesmen are wise they will prepare for the keen commercial competition which is sure to come.

RAILROAD NEEDS

The railroads declare they need 500,000 new freight cars to meet the demand for transportation equipment. The federal railroad administration lived up to its moral obligation to return the roads in as good condition as when they were taken over there would be no such car shortage now. But the unprecedented strain put upon the rolling stock by the war was not compensated by replacements, and the public is now paying the cost. When our transportation system has merged from the slough into which it was plunged by government operation the country will witness a return to normal conditions once more.

It requires the administration more to run the government now than it did during the war. Not strange at all. The administration only learned how to spend during the war. Practice makes perfect, and it is pretty darn near perfect now.

"There is enough for the church to do," says Vice-President Marshall, "without trying to reform Congress." And the extra task is such a heavy one too.

The official bartender in the league of nations will have to be a real expert. Just think of the number of different national drinks he will be called on to concoct.

ABSOLUTELY ALL TASTE IS TAKEN FROM CASTOR OIL

Wonderful New Process Robs Old Reliable Family Remedy of Disagreeable Taste.

The chemists of Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., one of the largest manufacturers of castor oil in the world, have perfected a remarkable process by which the taste is absolutely removed from castor oil. In the opinion of physicians and druggists who are already familiar with Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil, this remarkable improvement is a real blessing. It's the same old-fashioned castor oil that every physician prescribes. It has the same soothing and healing qualities that have made castor oil a household remedy. But that nauseating taste has been absolutely eliminated. Today you can take Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil easily, for it is really tasteless. Children take it without coaxing or bribing. Do not accept substitutes, if you want a realy tasteless castor oil. Two sizes, 35c and 65c. At all drggists. (Advt.)

Men Take Care
OF YOUR HAIR WHILE IT'S THERE

Does your scalp itch for a real dandruff ridding cleanser? Your scalp is not nightly cleaned if dandruff falls on your coat collar and scoulders. If dandruff starts, falling hair results. Haphazard way of neglecting the hair and scalp in this age of germs is a thing of the past. Hair needs care. CRUDOLEUM is the efficient combatant for dandruff and its accompanying germ. You may wash your scalp twice a week with soap and water but the great hair wrecker—dandruff, and its germ is not dispelled by this process, and soon flourishees again in all its glory. We urge you to prove CRUDOLEUM as professional hair dressers prove it. Just take 35c and go to F. J. John's drug store and say, "I want one of those large bottles of CRUDOLEUM," and then take it home and prove it out. Mr. F. J. John who is the agent in Charleroi is authorized to return your money if CRUDOLEUM does not do all of the above and more. Its healing touch, then comes the change. It will change all your ideas on scalp care. If your druggist does not keep it, send us 40c and parcel post will bring it to your door by return mail. Wm. M. Simpson Drug Co., Wholesale Druggists, Wilkinsburg Station, Pittsburg, Pa.

PAINS NEARLY DOUBLED ME UP

Nothing Helped Me Until I Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wyandotte, Mich.—"For the last four years I have doctored off and on without help. I have had pains every month so bad that I would nearly double up. Sometimes I could not sweep a room without stopping to rest and everything I ate upset my stomach. Three years ago I lost a child and suffered so badly that I was out of my head at times. My bowels did not move for days and I could not eat without suffering. The doctor could not help me and one day I told my husband that I could not stand the pain any longer and sent him to the drug-store to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the the doctor's medicine was [illegible] taking the [illegible] of Vegetable Compound and using two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash I could do my own housework. If it had not been for your medicine I don't know where I would be today and I am never without a bottle of it in the house. MOTHER SAW TRUTH AT ONCE

No Use Telling Her That Her Boy Had Made a Success in the World of Art.

He was a pianist, scarcely out of his teens. He had been sent abroad by wealthy friends for a four-years' course in his chosen art; had thereafter spent a year on the concert stage, and behind 200 or 300 newspaper reports of his success abroad he was now coming home.

When his train drew into the station and came to a stop the pianist, evincing the artistic temperament in his hair as well as in his manner, descended to the platform. At the same time the crowd of enthusiastic townspeople drew aside to allow his proud mother to be the first to welcome her son.

When she reached him, however, she gave a gasp and stood stock-still staring at him. The next moment she burst into sobs and fell on his neck.

"Henry!" the good woman cried. "They told me you were doing so well over there and makin' money plentiful. My poor boy!"

"What's the matter, mother?" exclaimed the bewildered son. "What makes you doubt what they told you?

"Oh, Henry!" she cried, unappeased. "I can see how you've suffered. You haven't even been able to scrape enough money together to get your hair cut!"

DO BRUTES' SPIRITS RETURN?

Abundance of Testimony Seeming to Prove That Ghosts of Animals Have Been Seen.

With such quantities of spirits running around loose, why not a few representing departed animals?

There is plenty of testimony indorsing animal ghosts. In India there are ghost elephants and ghost tigers that haunt the jungle. And natives of that country are restrained from abusing animals by a belief that the phantom of any mistreated creature will surely come back to bring misfortune to the offender.

Andrew Lang quotes a well-known naval officer as speaking of an occasion when the latter was visiting at the country house of a friend and a well-known bark was heard outside the door of the room where the two men sat.

"Why, there's old Peter," said the officer.

"Peter died since you were here last," replied his friend.

A fox terrier that was in the room whined and trembled violently. The door was pushed open and the pad-pad of a big dog's feet on the floor was heard. No dog was seen, but the invisible ghost of one walked to the hearthrug, shook itself and then flung itself heavily down, the jingle of its collar being distinctly audible.

A Whole League in Himself.

This puzzle in nationality has the marines guessing:

Louis C. Minette, accepted for enlistment in the United States marine corps at Tulsa, Okla., said that his mother was an American who married a Frenchman in Italy. He was born on a ship flying the Spanish colors while lying in the English channel. At the age of five his parents died in Sweden and he was adopted by a German who brought him to the United States. His adopted father is not a naturalized citizen.

"Would you class him as 'The Man Without a Country'?" the recruiting sergeant was asked.

"Man without a country nothing!" said the sergeant. "I'd class him as a League of Nations."

Feeding for Good Teeth.

The soon defective teeth of the adult are due in a great measure, according to an authority on dentistry, to the faulty kind of food given to children. Food which requires mastication tends to develop the gums and salivary glands, while the practice of giving too much liquid food causes narrow jaws, weakens the gums and mars physical beauty. The same authority continues: "Thin, small jaws consequent on liquid diet, do not furnish room enough to accommodate the teeth even were the blood supply sufficient—the teeth thus crowded failing to receive adequate nourishment—a most potent cause of defect in the enamel, and caries follows."

Gold was used for most part as a useful metal; for decoration and ornament; but it was often associated with religious thought. According to the Inca belief, an egg of copper fell from heaven from which sprang the nobility; and after a longer period an egg of gold fell from which issued the Inca. Among the Chocos of Colombia, an important idol of gold was worshiped and slaves were sacrificed to it at certain seasons of the year. The idol represented a woman, who was once human and gave birth to a child who became the creator.—Exchange.

State Has Had Nine Capitals.

The first complete report made in connection with the Raleigh and Wake county community study shows that the state of North Carolina has had nine capitals as follows: Bath, Edenton, Brunswick, Filmington, Newbern, Hillsboro, Smithfield, Fayetteville and Raleigh. The reason for so many lay in the custom, prior to 1791, of transferring the seat of government to the place of residence of the governor or to the temporary meeting place of the assembly.

When She Wakes Up.

Once a woman realizes that it is a very awkward and wasteful method to wash dishes with the drainboard on her right and the dishes piled on her left, she will have the drainboard changed to her left and stack her dishes on the right side where they will be most quickly get-at-able. And if she will go at her dishwashing job with the idea of eliminating every minute of waste-labor, she will also quickly learn the importance of adjusting her dishpan to the right height.

"Wanted—A Collaborator."

That all persons of artistic or literary aspirations are not as impractical as they are generally supposed to be, is proved by the following advertisement, which, says the Boston Herald, recently appeared in a Lorning paper: Wanted—A collaborator, by a young lady playwright. The play is already written; collaborator to furnish board and bed until play is produced.

United States' Superiority.

According to a report issued by the American bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, based upon a study of seventeen industries in the United States and Great Britain, it requires 18 per cent more power and two and one-half times more labor to do the same work, in the industries examined, in Great Britain than it does in the United States.

Holiday Enjoyment.

Few things are more delightful than a holiday which has been well-earned by conscientious, earnest work, bravely done throughout the year. A complete change in surroundings, interests and occupations should be part of a beneficial holiday. Resting does not mean idleness or cessation from activities or companionship.

To Revive Ferns.

Nitrate of soda dissolved in water should be given to ferns that are small or weak, one-quarter of an ounce of nitrate to a gallon of water. One-half an ounce of nitrate to a gallon of water should be used on plants that are large and vigorous. Soot and salt are also good to use occasionally.

Probably Not.

Not the Place for It.

Perseverance.

Because perseverance is so difficult, even when supported by the grace of God, thence is the value of new beginnings. For new beginnings are the life of perseverance.—E. B. Pusey.

How It Struck Elsie.

Little Elsie, sitting in a street car opposite a man with twitching eyelids, whispered to her mother: "Mamma, that poor man has the hiccups in his eyes."

An ingenious convict who recently escaped from jail at Lydenburg, South Africa, was captured on a farm where he was masquerading as a policeman in search of himself.

Rare Works of Art Stolen.

Twenty-five thousand dollars works of art were stolen from the church of San Mossimo, Padua, Italy, recently. Early in the morning, the thieves broke into the church and carried off two magnificent paintings by Giovanni Battista Tiepolo. The pictures hung in the side chapels on either side of the high altar, and were wrenched from their frames in such a hurry that portions of the canvas were left on the frames.

Out of His Sphere of Influence.

Father Farrell was addressing a little group of boys at the mission one night, and it wasn't long before all but one of them had been moved to tears. The good priest watched this boy closely, but he remained perfectly possessed. Finally, pointing a finger at the lad, he called out. "Why aren't you crying?" "Oh," says the boy, "I don't belong to this parish."—Judge.

Ancient and Honorable.

The word Gumboil, when used as a surname, has nothing at all to do with any part of the anatomy. It denotes that its first bearer was a man of considerable importance and great power in the state. It is derived from the Norse word "gumbald," which itself has nothing to do with any affliction, but means "bold in war."

Need Not Be Ashamed of Name.

The surname Snooks by no means seems to be an imposing cognomen; but, as a matter of fact, it is a name of great antiquity, and one of which nobody should be ashamed. In reality, it is a contraction of "Sevenoaks." It was first corrupted to Sennocc, which in turn was corrupted to Snooks of today.

How They Get Them.

Miss Gotrox was wearing a diamond spangle around her neck. "What is that?" asked the young man." "That?" she replied; "oh, that's only a doo dad." "A doo dad? Why do you call it that?" The cynic spoke up. "That's how they get 'em," he explained.

Bees Stopped Railway Traffic.

Bees held up railway traffic on the London and North-Western mail line near Shap Summit for several hours recently. The bees swarmed in a signal lamp. No relief was forthcoming until an official from Penrith dislodged them.

Names of Honorable Origin.

The surname Mouse denoted at first a man of great courage; while Mr. Ratt got his name from the fact that the first bearer of the name was a wise person, who gave "counsel" to the king.

Might Say Many Men.

"Some men," said Mrs. Pozzozzle, "think that because they have one poor little woman bamboozled at home, that they possess great executive ability."

Philosophical.

The philosophical proprietor of a seaside hotel ended his rules bulletin for men thus: "Remember, 'Time and tide wait for no man.' For ladies' rules, see other bulletin."—Judge.

The Reason.

"Miss De Pepper is one of the hottest dressers I know of." "She ought to be, she buys her clothes at fire sales."

Convincing.

Many people complain that they are not appreciated at their true worth; and the numerous empty prison cells seem to bear them out.

Hongkong's Tobacco Trade.

The import tobacco trade into Hongkong consists almost entirely of second-rate to waste tobacco, chiefly of filler from the Philippines which has been discarded for the fine trade by the great Philippine factories and of wrapper from Sumatra discarded by the high-grade trade and various tobaccos from Java, India and the Malay states which are not suitable for the fine trade anywhere.

Novelty for the Invalid's Chair.

A most inexpensive but charming tiny set for invalid's tray is a glass combination creamer, sugar and butter dish. The little crystal sugar is covered by the butter plate (as a lid), and it in turn fits over the creamer, so that all three may be fitted one into the other and take but little space on the tray.

Take Away Unused Sugar.

People in France when they dine at restaurants frequently appropriate the sugar they don't happen to use. Sugar in France is dear, and what is served with the coffee belongs, by right, to the purchaser as much as the coffee itself.—So why not take a lump or two home to little Jeanne or Pierre?

"Forget It."

If any desire becomes insatiable—and the desire to succeed may become so—there may result the most exhausting emotions. Frequent despair and depression, irritability and unreasonable anger may be frequent with a man who is unduly anxious to attain what he calls success. He will think too much about his mistakes unless some one dares to say to him, or he can say to himself, "Forget it!"

No Such Simplicity.

And yet there was never such a thing as "Jeffersonian simplicity." Mr. Jefferson was not a man of simple life, but of a full and expensive life. He was an aristocrat in all his personal tastes and indulged himself. He had traveled in Europe and observed how the trick was turned there. And both as secretary of state and as president he lived at the top of his time.—Washington Star.

MANY ROADS TO KNOWLEDGE

For Instance, Impudent Fake Resulted In Opening Up the Field of Electro-Therapy.

Along the road that leads to knowledge are scattered many fake-shops, which as a rule do a flourishing and profitable business. For the chief weakness of the human mind is credulity.

But by curious paradox, the foolishness factories every now and then produce something that proves of substantial usefulness to science.

For example, in New England many years ago a man named Perkins invented what he called a "magnetic tractor," for drawing diseases out of folk. It was shaped like a pair of compasses, with one leg of silver and the other of copper. When the two points were passed over the afflicted part of the body the instrument was supposed by some electrical means to alleviate or cure the trouble.

The "tractors" undoubtedly did benefit many people; also Perkins, who sold them for $5 apiece. They made such a sensation that scientists took the matter up, investigating it thoroughly and proving that imagination did the work. Blindfolded persons were relieved of pain by the contact of a couple of pointed sticks of wood, which they mistook for the instrument in question.

The whole business was plain foolishness. Nevertheless, the interest it awakened led to the first opening up of the field of electro-therapy, discoveries of which have proved of such immense importance to medical science.

WAS AHEAD OF HIS TIME

Peter Heulein, Who Made the First Watch, Accused of Witchcraft and Thrown Into Prison.

There is in existence today a letter dated April 22, 1527, from Martin Luther to Father Frederick Pistorius, the last abbot of St. Aegiduis in Nuremberg, in which he thanks the abbot for the gift of a watch, and adds: "I feel compelled to become a pupil of our mathematicians in order to understand this unique timekeeper." Never before had he seen such an object.

As he was familiar with clocks, what he meant, evidently, was that the time indicators on the clock were different from those on the watch which had been given to him. It is quite probable he had in his possession the first watch made by Peter Heulein, or at least one of his first ones. This Peter Heulein was a blacksmith and locksmith and devoted his time to mathematics and watchmaking, for which he was thrown into prison charged with witchcraft, which was then one of the easy ways of disposing of a rival or of a person who did things out of the ordinary.

But Peter persevered, and the name of Heulein and Nuremburg is preserved by a monument in his native town.

New Bells Made Like Old.

We have often heard of the beautiful silver tone of very old church bells in Europe and some have even been bought at a great price and brought to America. It was supposed that after a bell had rung regularly for one or two centuries some mysterious quality was developed, and the beautiful tone could be acquired in no other way. An ingenious American studied the problem, however, and decided that the silver tone was simply due to the fact that the clapper of the bell had worn itself and the bell by continued striking, until the two fit closely together and that the shape of the metal and nothing else determined the tone. He began to make bells by casting them so that the clapper and the bell fit each other properly, and the mellow silver tone was obtained at once. Today we are manufacturing such bells and selling them abroad.—Boys' Life.

Worry is really an evidence of lack of self-confidence and of faith in the power that runs the universe. It is a lack of faith in the power that, provided you do your part, will always bring things out better than you possibly could by yourself alone. Why should you worry, why should you fear, why should you be anxious, when God's vision and omnipotence are always ready to guide and serve you?

There never has been an instant in your life, my friend, which you could have safeguarded or provided for with a thousandth part of the wisdom with which God has guarded and provided for it. It is really a reflection upon him to be anxious about the future, to dread poverty and sickness, to worry about your business, to fear failure in your undertaking.—Orison Swett Marden in Chicago News.

Fierce Apparitions.

In the West Indies a sight of the "rolling calf" presages death or terrible misfortunes. The negroes are dreadfully afraid of possible encounter with it at night. It is white, of enormous size and with eyes that blaze like hot coals.

William Thorp, a learned student of such manifestations, writes of a phantom shark that haunts the waters about Nassau, in the Bahamas, where it is known as the "harbor master." It shines with a weird phosphorescent glow even in the daytime, and though hooked on many occasions and pulled in, it invariably vanishes from view at the last moment—simply melting into nothingness.

GAIT VARIES WITH SPECIES

It May Truthfully Be Said That No Two Animals or Birds Walk Exactly Alike.

The horse strikes his gait with a cheerful, steady and strong step; the cow is uncertain in its moving, lolling and tagging in its gait. "The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea." The ass trudges, and keeps a dull eye on the earth as it journeys along. The sheep trots, and bleats as it passes, while the goat springs aloft almost heedless of its footing. The gait of birds on the level varies a great deal. There is a sort of majestic carriage in the rook, stepping over a crumbling furrow. The red-footed pigeon trips it daintily; the heron stands, as if to think, and moves with stateliness within its narrow bounds. The dog casts a careless foot, scattering dust or mud without thought; while the cat advances a dainty paw, as if distrustful of the ground. The hen scratches, and pauses to look round, as if bewildered; while the peacock lifts its foot with seeming pride, and as if the earth were honored by its moving upon it at all. The pig takes ground anyhow, and without heeding, turning about, careless whether right or wrong. The little mouse scurries across the common path with something of the passivity of a blown leaf; while the rat assumes the ground to be its own possession, and prowls about with confidence and unconcern. Of all animals the hare bounds upon the earth as upon its heritage, and breasts it the whole day long. As Wordsworth noted, the hare "runs races in its mirth."

LAMB THAT GREW ON TREE

According to the Talmud, Remarkable Plant Furnished Food for Our Very Remote Ancestors.

How often is the wish expressed that money grew on trees? Why not wish for lamb to grow that way, for according to the Latin translation of the Talmud of Jerusalem, that ancient book of law and customs, wonderfully tender and eatable lambs did grow on trees.

This work, remarks a writer in the New York Evening Sun, tells of a plant called the jeduah, which was formed like a lamb. From a bunch of rather coarse, thick leaves there issued steam on which the zoophyte grew, so the story goes. In every respect it was formed like an animal suspended on a stalk within the radius of which it grazed. It devoured all the herbage which it was able to reach within the circle of its tether, and then unless some overventurous animal came near enough for it to snatch the lamb would die of starvation.

Our remote ancestors hunted the lamb at great risk, for historians tell us that the lamb had not earned its reputation for gentleness then. It was extremely ferocious, especially if it had exhausted its provender. The only way to overcome it was to cut the stem by well-aimed darts or arrows sent from a safe distance. Once the stem was severed the animal fell to the earth soon to die, and the successful hunter could safely come forth to carry his game back to his cave home.

Slaves in 1756.

Slavery existed in nearly all of the English colonies from an early period until shortly before or soon after the Revolutionary war, and the African trade was openly tolerated by the British government. In 1756 there were 292,000 slaves in the colonies, scattered from New England to Georgia. Slavery was not prohibited in Massachusetts until 1780, nor in Vermont until 1777. The United States census of 1810 showed 310 slaves in Connecticut, 10,851 in New Jersey, 15,017 in New York, 795 in Pennsylvania and 108 in Rhode Island. Slavery was gradually abolished in the northern states, but in 1820 there were still 97 slaves in Connecticut, 7,557 in New Jersey, 10,808 in New York, 211 in Pennsylvania and 48 in Rhode Island. The census of 1850 showed the disappearance of slavery in all the northern states except in New Jersey, which still had 236.—Indianapolis News.

An immense ruby, weighing 400 carats, is reported to have been found in Burmah, but it was broken into three pieces, and the report is that one of them was sold uncut in Calcutta for $233,333. A fine ruby, known as "Groga Bok," or the Dragon Lord, weighed 45 carats in the rough, 22 carats after the cutting process, and was said to be the finest of its size ever seen. In 1887 a stone of 49 carats was found and in 1890 one of 304 carats, according to Bauer, who treats the discovery of the 400-carat stone previously mentioned as simply an unverified report.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"The Father of Jests."

"The Father of Jests" is Joseph Miller, an English comedian, who was born in 1684 and died at London in 1738. The collection of jests known as "Joe Miller's Jests" appeared originally in 1739 as "Joe Miller's Jest Book, Or the Wit's Vade Mecum, etc." It was made by John Mottley and received its name unwarrantably from Joseph Miller. It was popularly said that Joe Miller never made up a joke in his life and could neither read nor write. Most stale jests are now known as a "Joe Miller" from the fact that it is supposed to have at some time emanated from this source.

Pumpkin Valuable Food.

The pumpkin is not only a delectable food in pies, but is a valuable substitute for potatoes in bread, while the edible seeds contain a considerable amount of oil. Mixed with pumpkin porridge, 10 per cent of the flour is saved. Freed from the seed-coat, the seeds can be substituted for almonds; or they will yield 50 per cent of oil, which averages 26 per cent of nitrogenous material and nearly 26 per cent of crude fat. The oil cake may be used as animal food or nearly 26 per cent of nitrogenous material may be used as animal food or purified for human food. It is figured that an acre will produce about 11 tons of pumpkins, which will furnish about eight tons of bread material and 80 pounds of oil, besides 2¾ tons of green fodder 220 pounds of ground seed-coats, and 140 pounds of oil cake.

Troubles of Life.

It would be a great thing if people could be brought to realize that they can never add to the sum of their happiness by doing wrong. In the case of children indeed, we recognize this; we perceive that a spoilt child is not a happy one; that it would have been far better for him to have been punished at first and thus saved from greater suffering in after life. It is a beautiful idea that every man has with him a guardian angel; and it is true, too, for conscience is ever on the watch, ever ready to warn us of danger. We often feel disposed to complain, and yet it is most ungrateful. But perhaps it may be said we are sent here in preparation for another and a better world. Well, then, why should we complain of what is but a preparation for future happiness?—Sir John Lubbock.

Birds Used For Fishing.

In Japan the natives have the birds do their fishing for them to a great extent. The custom of having sea birds catch fish is practiced widely, particularly on the Nagaar river in the province of Owari. In some parts of China birds are used in the same way. The cormorants work in teams and once caught and trained will work well for 20 years. The fishing always is at night by torch light, says the American Forestry magazine. Cords let over the side of a boat a dozen at a time. The torches attract the fish and then the fisherman is the busiest man in the world, for he has to work fast. The average is about 150 fish per hour per bird. They work for three hours at a time.

Liszt a Dry Smoker.

Liszt was a dry smoker of a peculiar type. Massenet, who knew him well in his later years tells us that Liszt could not play unless he had a cigar in his mouth, which he never troubled to light. He would sit down to the piano with a cigar between his teeth and keep munching it all the time he played. When the cigar was quite eaten up, the Abbe would rise from the instrument exhausted.

FORCED TO BECOME PIRATE

Great-Grandfather of President Fillmore Coerced Into Sailing Under the Black Flag.

John Fillmore, great-grandfather of Millard Fillmore, the thirteenth president of the United States, was a pirate, though he was a pirate in spite of himself. The story begins with the first quarter of the eighteenth century, when the freebooters, Bluebeard, Low and Phillips, swept the Atlantic coast from Jamaica to Newfoundland. Phillips captured the Dolphin of Cape Ann a vessel commanded by Andrew Harriden.

Harriden discovered among the pirates' crew two young men, John Fillmore and Edward Cheesman, whom Phillips had captured and made pirates against their will. They had determined either to escape from the pirate's clutches or to capture his vessel and bring him and his crew to justice. They fixed an appointed hour for making the attempt at escape after reaching an agreement with Harriden.

The signal was given when only three were on deck, one of whom was Phillips. One of the men was thrown overboard, and the other two were killed. This was done while the crew was below in the hold of the ship. The captors then sprang into the hold and placed the rest of the crew in chains, steered the vessel for Boston, and arrived there May 3, 1724. Two of the pirates were hanged, while Fillmore, Cheesman and his confederates were acquitted.

FORESEE APPROACH OF DEATH

Writer Tells of Instances Where Animals Evidently Sensed Dissolution and Feared It.

I am perplexed at the way in which the lower animals sometimes have a premonition of death and fear it, while at other times they appear to be perfectly indifferent to death.

I have known a dog to beg not to be taken on a railway journey, when usually he used to dance about with delight when he saw these preparations being made. On the occasion on which he exhibited distress he slipped off the platform, was run over and killed.

I have known a horse who was a very free jumper refuse obstinately a small fence and; when his rider forced him over it the horse broke his back.

A bullfinch—not a pet, but merely one of a cageful of birds—dropped down screaming; I took him out and so long as he lay in my hand he was quite quiet, but he screamed if I attempted to put him back on some cotton wool. He lay in my hand for a quarter of an hour and died quite quietly

I have had a horse refuse to pass under a tree under which he had passed every day for years. It was a perfectly calm day. I drove him round the tree, and as I did so a big branch fell upon exactly the spot on which we would have been if I had not let the horse go round.—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

Must Earn Nature's Favors.

Nature will not reveal her beauty, her joy, her splendor, her magnificence or her sublimity to the selfish or the hurried soul. She thinks too much of her great treasures of marvelous mystery to fling them out to the penurious, greedy, hurried human being, to the casual eye, to those who are rushing along at railroad speed. No one can successfully woo and win her who is not willing to study her, take time to observe her, and listen to her voice. She tells her secrets, reveals her mysteries and beauties only to those who know how to wait, who take time to think, to ponder; to those who can appreciate and love these things well enough to spend time with her.—Orison Swett Marden in Chicago News.

When a hole is worn in tapa cloth it is only necessary to moisten the edges and beat them together. Tapa cloth was once woven or pounded into shape in many parts of the South Sea islands. It is made of the barks of the banana, breadfruit or mulberry. The rough outer bark is first scraped off and the inner fibers are beaten together and allowed to ferment. So fine is the texture of the cloth that one would never imagine it had been prepared in this crude manner. It is bleached to a dazzling white color in the sun, and when made into garments is practically indestructible.—Boys' Life.

Manhattan in the Indian Tongue.

We had a sad shock the other day when we learned from one of our learned clients that Manhattan, in the Indian tongue, is said to mean "The place where they all get drunk." According to William Loring Andrews' book, "The Bradford Map" (1893), shown by James F. Drake, the native name was coined in happy memory of the greatly regrettable revel that transpired when Peter Minuit (we think it was) put over his deal with the Indians with the aid of a flagon of schnapps. We trust Mr. Anderson will take immediate steps to have the name of the island changed —Christopher Morley in New York Evening Post.

CLAIMS A GREAT DISCOVERY

Englishman Convinced That In Uncooked Vegetables and Fruit He Has Found Ideal Fare.

"It is an entirely erroneous idea that human beings derive their energy from food," says Mr. William Aird of Sompting, Sussex, England, who claims that he lives like the hares and squirrels.

"Each human being," he contends, "has a certain capital amount of energy which can be spent slowly or rapidly, but cannot be supplemented."

Mr. Aird is an engineer. Formerly he suffered from very bad health, but after six years of experimenting in dieting came to the conclusion that uncooked fruit and vegetables formed ideal fare. Today, although nearly fifty, he claims the feelings of a boy of eighteen.

"When I searched for the means of health," he says, "I studied the wild animals on the Sussex downs. So certain am I that I have found the true path of life, that I am willing to be inoculated with smallpox, cancer, plague, anthrax, tuberculosis, or any disease you care to mention. I am sure that germs would not live in my body.

"I offered to undergo the test in a London hospital, but the surgeons would not take the risk. This offer still holds good, and if it is not accepted I shall probably inoculate myself in public."

UNIQUE SCHEME OF REVENGE

Sardonic Humor in Tale of How Frenchman "Got Even" With His Fellow-Citizens.

A quaint short story by Rodolphe Bringer, a marvel of French brevity, appeared not long ago in L'Humanite. It is called "The Benefactor's Revenge," and the tale is of a millionaire in a small town who was piqued because he was not elected mayor. Presently he died, partly of annoyance. The funeral was magnificent, but the townsfolk did not attend. They distrusted the millionaire. Imagine the shock of pleasure, then, when they learned that he had bequeathed 3,000,000 francs to the municipality! It was given on condition that the town should undertake to nourish and sustain all the poor, without distinction of age, sex or nationality, who lived within its boundaries. At once the popularity of the deceased took a tremendous jump. A philanthropist; he had been misjudged. A pedestal was prepared for his statue. Today the pedestal still remains uncrowned. A town that was hard working and unknown to poverty and misery became the mecca for all the scamps in France. Since the day on which the will was proclaimed tramps, rogues and apaches have not ceased to pour through its gates. At last it awoke to the dark intention of its benefactor.—Boston Post.

"Knights of the Hammer."

Some folks always see things through indigo glasses. Neither reason nor evidences of success can change the hue. Everything is on the road to ruin and the talk is the kind that drops the bottom out of a fellow's ambitions. The only way to get peace when they are around is to keep them so busy that they do not have time to use the hammer. If you can keep their minds off themselves there is a chance to have some good work from them. They are often skillful enough if you can only get them busy. And as long as you can keep them busy they have no time to think about themselves. And you may be one of these folks. If you are, get busy and stay busy. It's the only way to be happy and fair with your fellowmen.—Grit.

Adhesive From Snails.

Many of the larger kinds of snails have at the extremity of their bodies small white bladders filled with a gelatinous substance. It has been discovered that this is the strongest adhesive known for the repairing of porcelain, glass, etc. The substance is applied thinly to both sides of the fracture, and the broken piece is tied firmly together so that all is held in place. A rather longer time for drying should be given than in the case of ordinary adhesives so as to allow the natural glue to acquire the greatest degree of strength. When it is once really set the tenacity of this remarkable adhesive is astonishing.—Scientific American.

Appreciated Cooper's Work.

The first American novel to win popularity outside our own language is said to have been James Fenimore Cooper's "Spy." Cooper had to publish it at his own expense, as no American publisher would accept it. It was quickly translated into French, German and Spanish, and later was published in thirty-four different places in Europe. Cooper translations are often better literature than the original, as the best elements of the story are not lost in translation and many stylistic defects disappear in the hands of a literary translator.

Doubtful Testimonial.

"I don't know whether to accept this testimonial or not," mused the hair restorer man.

"What's the matter with it?" demanded the advertising manager.

"Well," explained the boss, "the man writes: 'I used to have three spots on the top of my head, but since using a bottle of your hair restorer I have only one.'"—London Tit-Bits.

Is a Canceled Check a Receipt?

Does an indorsed and canceled check always constitute a valid receipt for payment of a bill? An article in the American Printer quotes a judicial opinion to show that it does not. "Unless the checks show upon their face for what purpose they were given, or there is some other positive evidence as to the transaction to which the checks were referable," says the court, "we think the burden continues upon the party pleading payment to show that the checks were given in payment of account." In the case cited the printer had to pay the $100 in dispute, which according to his claim he had already paid. The remedy suggested is to write on the face of the check the date and amount of the invoice in payment of which it is given.—Outlook.

What Is Education?

If you dissect the word you will find it means the act of drawing out of. Some people seem to think it means the act of cramming into. The aim of true education is to draw out the natural faculties and abilities of the learner so as to prepare him for the battle of life, and the duties and responsibilities of citizenship in the sphere for which he is best fitted by inclination and capacity; to enable him to perform these duties with benefit to himself and advantage to the state; to teach him to do his work well and worthily—whatsoever his hand findeth to do to do it with all his might; to instill into him that all work is honorable; to bring out of him all that is manly and sterling and true, and, above all, to help him to help himself.—Exchange.

World's Debt to Great Minds.

It is through the toils of personal sacrifices that we make progress. Faraday's poverty made keen his study of chemistry. He lived for it and to him much of the world's present progress is due. Humphry Davy has done much to help the world, but it allowed him to perform his great experiments with kitchen pots and pans. Michelangelo has well earned a place among the immortals, but his poverty was such that he had to share his bed with his three assistants while engaged on his great statue of Pope Julius II. A smaller man would have quit in disgust or he would have gone on strike for higher pay. Such devotion is bound to live and benefit the people who come after them.—Grit.

Life's Failures.

Many think that fortune and luck give all the plums to the favorites. So they make no effort to get ahead. Their philosophy gives them no vision and life holds out to them no promises. It's no wonder they just peter along complaining as they go. They pour their woes into every idle ear that has nothing to do but listen. Sometimes they even rant at length against the very agencies that make possible their poor existence. They may be true in ascribing their existence to luck and their continuance of life to fortune, but as to getting along among others—that's neither luck nor fortune. To move up demands pluck and energy.—Exchange.

Early Adventurers.

The early Norsemen were the first arctic explorers on record—not conscious searchers for a theoretical north pole, but restless wanderers and adventurers over the face of the sea that washed the shores of their homeland. It was gain, piratical gain, that mostly moved them, and some of their discoveries—such as that of the island of Iceland—were largely matters of accident. But whether by accident or urge or the lure of new lands and new experiences, Greenland and even Newfoundland were reached by these hardy men in boats no larger than a good-sized modern lifesaving craft.

Charles the First.

For ourselves, we own that we do not understand the common phrase, a good man, but a mad king. We can as easily conceive a good man and an unnatural father, or a good man and a treacherous friend. We cannot, in estimating the character of an individual, leave out of our consideration his conduct in the most important of all human relations; and if in that relation we find him to have been selfish, cruel, and deceitful, we shall take libery to call him a bad man, in spite of all his temperance at table, and his regularity at chapel.—Macaulay.

"Schoolchildren do not always grasp the facts that we wish them to grasp when we give them the life of some great American to read," said the schoolteacher. "My children were reading about Benjamin Franklin, and when I asked one of the most eager pupils in the class what she could tell me of the great statesman she said with a rush: 'He was the 15th of 17 children and he hated arithmetic.'"—Springfield Union.

Poverty and Feeble Mindedness.

Fifty per cent of the inmates of our almshouses are feeble minded, showing there is a definite relation between poverty and feeble mindedness.

The Way of the World.

A man may be a failure without knowing it, but if he is a success he not only knows it himself, but lets everybody else know it.

A Valued Servant.

For many years an old laborer had been engaged by a farmer to dig his potatoes at a fixed sum per acre. When he died the farmer was obliged to get another man, and a day or two after he had started work he strolled round to see how the new man was progressing. To his surprise, at one end of the field he found a large heap of stones. "Here, wot's this mean?" he demanded. "Well, sir," responded the man, "we thought we'd save ye a bit of trouble next seed-time, so whenever we finds a stone in the taties we just dumps it down there." "Ah," said the farmer sadly, "I shall never find another man like old Joe!" "Oh!" said the other, rather nettled. "Why, old Joe was nearly blind an' didn't know a stone when he seen one!" "Mebbe he didn't and mebbe he did," replied the farmer, "but he worn't so particular about keepin' 'em out of the taties. They weighs."

Soot in the Chimney.

Soot accumulating at the bottom of chimneys is often the seat of a smoldering fire and also introduces considerable explosion risk. A simple, inexpensive and successful device is suggested for removing the soot. A hopper bottom is built into the stack, and the bottom of the hopper is connected to the suction of a steam jet conveyor of small diameter, which discharges into the ashbin or pit. The usual steam-jet conveyor used to remove ash and cinder will not work satisfactorily in removing soot from the base of the stack; small diameter pipes are necessary to secure the high air velocity needed to remove the fine, flaky particles of soot. Similar conveyors are used to remove combustion ashes from the back passes of boilers and soot from breechings, flues and economizers.

"Passion Play" in History.

The "Passion Play" is a survival of the mystery and miracle plays of the later middle ages celebrated by the church at Christmas, Good Friday and Easter. Those ancient entertainments were first given in Latin and afterward in the vernacular tongue, and with this innovation rather more than a spice of the comical was interlarded, for which reason the performance was removed to the open air. In 1427 a nine-story stage was erected at Metz. The matter of congruous costume troubled the actors not at all and the burgomaster's robe was borrowed for Judas, one of the angels, or any character that stood in need of it. But the "Passion Play" as given by the Bavarians is performed reverently and is as solemn and consistent as its actors can make it.

What Astonished Canadian.

A Canadian paying his first visit to London was asked what he thought of it. "Well," he replied, "it is astonishing the number of people who have got a shine on their boots in the morning." He then explained that over on the other side landladies never brush boots, with the result that people of both sexes get into a habit of patronizing "shoe shine parlors" when they want their boots cleaned.

Indispensable Plow.

Plowing is the father of industries the indispensable primary operation upon which civilization has depended from the earliest ages, and the plow is thus the most useful and necessary implement which has ever been designed by mankind for his own advancement. Without the plow agriculture is impossible, and without agriculture no industry can exist.—From "Electricity for the Farm and Home," by Frank Koester.

"A Little Bird Told Me So."

The popular expression, "A little bird told me so," used to convey the idea that by telling you would betray your informant, but is probably adapted from the twentieth verse of the tenth chapter of Ecclesiastes: "Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber; for a bird of the air shall carry thy voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter."

Tuberculosis in Europe.

From one-tenth to one-fourth of the total mortality of Europe is caused by tuberculosis. The approximate number of deaths in each million of the population from tuberculosis in certain countries is given as follows: Russia, 4,000; Austria-Hungary, 3,500; France, 3,000; Germany, 2,200; Holland, 1,900; Italy, 1,800; Scotland, 1,700; England, 1,400.

Our young people have thought and written much on labor and reform, and for all that they have written, neither the world nor themselves have got on a step. Intellectual tasting of life will not supersede muscular activity. If a man should consider the nicety of the passage of a piece of bread down his throat, he would starve.—Emerson.

Tire Treads
Improved 25%

The latest Miller triumph is a super-grade tread. It excels the best rival treads today by an average of 25 per cent. This has been proved, under careful watch, by many road comparisons.

The Miller Tire mileage is the talk of the day. But these new-grade treads outwear the balance of the tire.

Not one Miller Tire, built with this new tread, has ever come back with the tread gone.

These treads do not vary. Every day the Miller tread stock is vulcanized and tested in the laboratory. It must prove up to these new standards before a tread is made.

Miller Cord Tires, in the factory tests, now average 15,000 miles. Miller Fabrics from 8,000 to 9,000 miles. And these factory tests are extreme.

Watch your mileage on one Miller Tire. Compare it with any other and it will win you. You owe that to yourself in view of Miller records.

HOGAN IDENTIFIED AS ONE OF THE FINLEYVILLE BANK ROBBERS

Young Man who Helped to Right Bandit Car Recognized Prisoner

HOGAN NOW IN COUNTY JAIL

Positively identified as the driver of the car that carried the six or seven men who participated in the looting of the First National Bank of Finleyville on May 24, John Hogan, arrested two weeks ago at Elco, has been placed in the county jail. The prosecution was brought against him by Joseph F. Boyer, cashier of the Finleyville bank, and Hogan was given a hearing before Alderman Elwood at Monongahela, Wednesday night and placed in jail on Thrsday.

The identification of Hogan was made my a young man who assisted in righting of a car that had struck a culvert on the Finleyville-Thompsonville-Canonsburg road, a short time after the robbery had taken place at Finleyville. This young man, when Hogan was brought before him, did not hesitate a moment in saying that he was the driver of the car. Hogan's features are such that, if seen once, cannot be forgotten. The description of the car that struck the culvert that afternoon, even to the license number, it is said, answers the description of the car that carried the bank looters. The young man said that the can contained five or six men in addition to the driver. The curtains were on the machine. The car, when it hit the culvert, was being driven at high speed. When it went into the ditch the driver made great haste to get it righted and seemed nervous and excited.

This accident occurred on the road that the bandits were believed to have taken that afternoon. It will be recalled that on the same road a pig was run over and killed by a car that went speeding by.

Hogan has a bad reputation. Having served a term in the Western Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza. Sloan Daughterty of Monongahela, is also in jail, held because of certain statements he made concerning the robbery. These statements seemed to indicate he knew something about the robbery. He also served time at Morganza.

ESCAPED BY WAY OF MONONGAHELA VALLEY

It is believed that the bandits who robbed the First National Bank at Hays station on Tuesday noon, escaped by way of the Monongahela valley. Allegheny county officers followed them as far as Brownsville where the trace was lost. But for following a "hunch" at Monongahela it is belived the officers would have succeeded in capturing the robbers. At that point the officers turned off the regular road and in so doing lost a good chance to overtake the bandits. An officer in Brownsville saw the car carrying the men going through Brownsville but was not at that time advised of the robbery.

BOY DROWNED IN RIVER AT MONONGAHELA

Joseph Ramsey, aged 12 son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ramsey, was drowned in the Monongahela river at the foot of Twelfth street, Monongahela Wednesday evening about 6:30 o'clock. The boy was in bathing at the time, equipped with "water wings," being unable to swim. The swells of a passing towboat took the boy beyond his depth and he was drowned. The boy had not been recovered at noon today.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT BENTLEYVILLE

Bentleyville was visited by a destructive fire at noon today, and damage to the extent of several thousand dollars was done before the flames were got under control.

The buildings destroyed are the school building, on Main street, the Kopple fruit store, which adjoined the school property, John Snyder's store and Perkin's barber shop.

The fire started shortly after 11 o'clock in the Kopple fruit store and spread so rapidly that the volunteer fire department was powerless to cope with its spread. Fearing for the destruction of the town, emergency calls were sent to Brownsville, West Brownsville, Washington, Charleroi, Donora and Monongahela and all of them responded with their fire trucks.

The fire soon destroyed the big frame school building and spread from there to the Haberlin building, a big structure built of terra cotta, and also to the Marshall lumber yards, but with the combined aid of the various fire departments the flames were halted before doing a great amount of damage to either the building or the lumber piles. The fire was under control at one o'clock.

It will be hard to estimate the losses of the various individuals, but it will reach into the thousands. This makes the fourth serious fire that has visited Bentleyville in the past year or so, and all of them have been destructive. The Kopple store was erected on the site of a store destroyed last summer by a blaze which for a time threatened to take the school building, but through the heroic efforts of fire departments from outside the town the structure was saved. The big garage fire of last winter was also destructve and this loss coming so quickly has dealt Bentleyville a heavy financial blow.

Give Banquet to Retiring And Welcome New Teacher

About fifty members of the Star class of the Christian church and a few guests participated in a most successful banquet at the church last night. The occasion was the class' farewell to Mr. J. E. Newcomer of Monessen, who has been "teacher, friend and brother" to those young people for the pat six years, and who with his family is shortly leaving for the Pacific coast. It was the class welcome, also, to their new pastor, Rev. F. C. Lake.

The banquet room and the tables had been tastefully decorated in the class colors by a committee of the young people under direction of Mrs. Roger Long. The banquet was prepared by acommittee of ladies, consisting of Mrs. Joseph Jacobs, Mrs. George Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth Allfree, and Mr. J. M. Whitlatch. The rapidity of its disappearance was eloquent testimony to its quality.

Miss Bessie Reilly acted as toastmistress with fine poise and in a way that bespoke careful preparation. Short talks were made by the following members of the class: Queen Wilson, Elizabeth Hogan, Alberta Johnson, Lillian Shannon, and Park Newcomer; also by the guests, Rev. and Mrs. Percy Davis, of Monessen, J. D. Berryman A. L. Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Newcomer and the Rev. F. C. Lake.

In behalf of the class Roger Long, in a few fitting and well chosen words presented Mr. Newcomer an appropriate expression of the good will and enduring frendsip of the class. J. D. Berryman, the unanimous choice of the young people, will succeed Mr. Newcomer as class teacher.

A picture of theclass will be taken next Sunday morning at the Bible school hour.

ASK RESIDENTS TO HONOR OUR VISITORS

The decorating committee having in charge the decorations for the High school auditorium, for the Sunday school convention to be held there Thursday and Friday, June 17 and 18, have all their plans prepared and will begin working them out early next week. The committee expects to have quite a handsome display for the delegates, of whom about 600 are expected to attend the gathering. The committee would like if the people of the community would show their appreciation of the visitors' presence by making a display at their homes, a flag or some bunting a feature which would no doubt be highly appreciated by those who will be with us for two days of the coming week.

Dear Friend:—I have been enjoying first class health during the past winter and present spring, eating well and sleeping well, suffered less from rheumatic pains during the last six months than n equal space of time for many years prevously, entirely due to the treatment you gave me, as I verily believe.

I feel that, in a way, it was fortunate for me that I had an attack of sciatica last summer because I learned something of real value to me. Your diagnosis is not groping in the dark and making a guess then experimenting with drugs, the merits of which may lie in their being harmless.

Nothing empirical in your practice either in detecting the cause or in treating the disorder.

Glad to learn that you have opened an office in Brownsville.

It is good evidence that the old drug treatment of disease is going into desuetude. I will distribute the cards you sent me amongst my friends.

With best wishes for your continued success and prosperity I subscribe myself

Your Friend,
Jacob Gayman.

BROOKS LAW STILL EFFECTIVE IN THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA

Fayette County Courts Rule It Is Not Incompatible With Federal Law

DECISION VERY IMPORTANT

Indictments drawn under teh Brooks law regulating the sale of liquor in Pennsylvania were sustained by Judge E. H. Reppert, of the Fayette county courts, on Monday, in dismissing motions tos uppress importation in 14 cases charging the sale of Jamaica ginger as a beverage.

The decision was considered quite important from a legal standpoint, rasmuch as counsel for the defendants n arguing the motion held that enforcement of the prohibition amendment now rested solely with the federal government, and would remain there until the state legislature enacted laws concurrent to the provisions of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead enforcement act. It was argued that state courts at present were without jurisdiction, but that point Judge Reppert denied n dismissing the motion. He announced that Judge Van Swearingen concurred in the opinion.

"Indictments drawn under the Brooks law are not inconsistent with th eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act," ruled Judge Reppert, "and we will sustain indictments drawn as they have always been drawn as if neither the eighteenth amendment of the Volstead act did not exist."

The Jamaica ginger cases have been recognized as the most important to come before the Fayette county court during the present June term, and the attack upon the indictments Monday morning followed by announcement that the point would be settled later in the day by argument, attracted much interest among members of the bar. Counsel for the 14 defendants arraigned for selling Jamaica ginger as a beverage, held that enforcement of prohibition legislation now rested solely with the federal government, and would remain there until the State legislature enacted concurrent legislation to enforce the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead enforcement act. That point Judge Reppert denied.

The motion before the court was to suppress the information upon the grounds of want of jurisdiction. Counsel for the defense argued that the Brooks law was enacted to make legal the sale of liquor and that it conflicted with the federal legislation, inasmuch as the prohibition amendment prohibits its sale. The contention was summed up in the statement that the amendment prohibited while the Brooks law regulated.

The contention of District Attorney Willam A. Miller was that the Brooks law was not inconsistent with the federal legislation and in that the court concurred.
